November, 1955

Dear Alum:

This is a true story. A story that is many, many years old, one which we hope will never have an ending. You helped make this story, for you lived it. It is the story of Ohio University with its proud traditions, of which we, the undergraduates, are proud to be part.

Some things have changed here at Ohio University, but there are those things that will never change. There are still the crisp fall afternoons of football and Homecoming, the trips to Lake Hope, the College Green covered with a blanket of white snow, Christmas carols, parties, finals, and that first beautiful balmy spring afternoon when convertible tops come down and students realize that another wonderful, busy and happy year is about to close.

All these things are followed closely by the eyes of the ATHENA camera.

But, Ohio University is also building. Mingled with the pulsating life of students and activity is . . . progress! We have many new and beautiful buildings that add distinction to our campus. The present and future is truly Ohio University.

Just as Ohio University is building, so is ATHENA. This year there will be a total of 304 pages (32 more than last year) which will show the campus in a panorama of pictures. There will be six full pages of Homecoming, plus all the other major activities of the year.

Yes, we have a story here at Ohio University that will never be forgotten. Your story — Our story — A story of the future. With the help of the ATHENA camera — between the covers of our book — the story will be recorded forever.

WHEN GOVERNOR

Frank J. Lausche announced the re-appointment of Gordon K. Bush to the Ohio University Board of Trustees this summer, it marked the first time in the University's history that a trustee had been named to a fifth term on the Board. To Ohio University and its alumni, the occasion was another milestone in a record of unselfish service dating back to the Athens Messenger publisher's graduation in 1924.

A former chairman of the Board, and currently chairman of its planning, building, and land purchase committee, Mr. Bush has been one of the leaders in the tremendous physical growth of the campus in the past few years. Working closely with President Baker and other top administrators of OU, he has contributed countless hours of his time formulating plans for expansion and then seeing that they are carried out to a satisfactory completion.

Mr. Bush was first appointed to the Board of Trustees to fill a vacancy left by the death of his father, Frederick W. Bush, '92, in 1929. That same year he succeeded his father as editor and publisher of the Messenger.

In addition to his active participation in Board affairs since that time, Publisher Bush has given strong support to many University and alumni projects.

A joint Messenger-University program of practice reporting, editing, and advertising for journalism students has been expanded each year to take care of increasing enrollments at OU. The practical training students receive through their part-time association with the newspaper has been an important factor in the high national rating given the OU School of Journalism.

During the Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund drive, a $2,500 scholarship was donated by the Messenger in honor of Frederick W. Bush, and a great deal of support was given the campaign by the newspaper and its publisher.

A native of Athens, Gordon Bush continued his education after graduating from Ohio University, by earning a Bachelor of Science in Journalism from the University of Missouri, and the Master of Business Administration degree from Harvard University.

Before returning to Athens and the Messenger, he served as business representative for the United Press and director of research for the United Business Publishers in New York City.

For many years the Messenger has received national recognition for having a circulation nearly twice the size of the city's population.

During his years as publisher, Mr. Bush has been president of the Select List of Ohio Dailies, and a member of the Ohio Publicity & Development Commission and the Ohio Aviation Board. He has also served as director of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, as a group commander in the Civil Air Patrol, a member of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, Rotary, and the University Club of Columbus.

In 1948 Mr. Bush was one of a number of U. S. newsmen selected as guests on Navy cruises in order to acquaint them with peacetime training activities. The only civilian among 1400 Naval regulars and reservists, the Athens publisher went from Boston to Newfoundland aboard the U.S.S. Albany, then to Greenland and back to Norfolk, Va. as a guest of Admiral W. H. P. Blanding aboard the admiral's four-engined aerial flagship.

This summer he attended the Big Four conference in Geneva, Switzerland, accredited to the American delegation by Presidential Press Secretary Hagerty and to the Associated Press staff by the Geneva AP headquarters and the Swiss government.

Mrs. Bush, the former Izotta A. Ackerman, is a graduate of the New York School of Fine and Applied Design. Married September 6, 1930, Mr. and Mrs. Bush have three children, Gordon Kenner, Jr., a senior at Colgate University; Joan, a sophomore at Hollins College, Va.; and Jennie Ray, an Athens High School freshman.

The enthusiasm of Homecoming is reflected in the face of Ohio University's head cheerleader, Jean Ann Newland. salesmen wanted

ON THE EVE of Homecoming, less than three weeks ago, an important group of alumni emphatically adopted a resolution "to sell Ohio University to alumni through such media as is compatible with the Board of Trustees as recommended by President John C. Baker."

On the surface such a resolution might sound as unnecessary as selling a hungry child on the idea of eating ice cream. Why should alumni have to be sold on their own alma mater?

Many do not have to be sold. As a subscriber to the magazine, you are very likely one of these. The fact that you continue membership in the Alumni Association shows that you have an active interest in Ohio University and her graduates.

But there are a great many whose interest has waned. For one reason or another their contacts with Ohio University have been dropped completely, and even the job of keeping up-to-date address files for them becomes impossible.

Consequently some of the links in the Alumni Association chain become weakened, and the result can certainly not enhance the reputation of the university. These are the links which the resolution seeks to strengthen.

The resolution did not originate from the university. It came straight from a group of successful and sincere alumni representing all parts of the country and it is the basis for a re-organizational alumni program that is bound to work. One look at the calibre of men who unanimously made and accepted the resolution convinces you of that.

Coming from California, New York, Florida, Massachusetts, Missouri, Ohio, and many points in between, members of the new Board of Directors of the Ohio University Alumni Association instigated and pledged to carry out this promise to their university.

The structural part of the program they plan to develop is presented on pages 6 and 7, and well deserves the attention of all OU alumni. Directors themselves are serving on committees to start the program moving.

The resolution and all it implies is by no means meant to be a criticism of those alumni who are not active members of the Association. The directors simply feel that alumni have every reason to be proud of their university, and that the reasons for such pride are increasing every day.

One director made the observation that all that would be necessary to rekindle such pride in those who may have lost it would be to have them come to Ohio University and see what is being done to provide quality education.

Being practical men, however, the directors know that it would be possible to bring everyone back to make up his own mind. Therefore, they intend to take the story to the alumni—to improve and increase the channels of communication with the confidence that Ohio University can't help but sell itself, and that alumni will respond with a pride that will bring increased interest and respect from all quarters.

A New Record

One year ago Ohio University Registrar Robert E. Mahn reported in writing that an estimated 2169 coeds would be enrolled for the 1955-56 school year. Last month final tabulations were in, and the number of coeds recorded—exactly 2169.

Registrar Mahn, whose amazingly accurate predictions have become well known at OU, had also been extremely close on other data concerning the University's record-breaking enrollment.

The official on-campus enrollment total of 6104 represents a 16 percent increase over last year and is well above the previous high of 5611 in 1948.

A breakdown by degree colleges shows Commerce leading with 840, followed by Education with 828, Arts and Sciences 759, Applied Science 639, and Fine Arts 430.

A record 2079 entering freshmen far outnumber students in other classes which include 1643 sophomores, 1044 juniors, and 901 seniors. Other statistics report 180 graduate students and 56 special under-graduates. Transfer students number 201.

Thirty-eight different states, 25 foreign countries, and all 88 counties of Ohio are represented by students on the campus this year.

Leading the counties again is Cuyahoga with 1071. Twelve other counties, Athens, Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Lake, Lorain, Mahoning, Montgomery, Muskingum, Richland, Stark, and Summit, have more than 100 students enrolled.

The majority of out-of-state students are from New York, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. New York and West Virginia with 190 and 122 students respectively, are the leaders. A total of 707 students from out-of-state and 58 from foreign countries are enrolled.

Despite the large enrollment, registration took the average student less than 15 minutes, thanks to a quick processing system organized by the registrar's office. Schedules for upperclassmen had been tentatively arranged during a spring counseling period when each student received individual vocational guidance.

This year many of the freshmen counseled while attending the Pre-College Conference Program (October Alumnus).

Thus, most students already had schedule cards before the actual registration process began. If a student needed no changes in his schedule and followed the proper arrows through the library, he could complete registration in 12 minutes flat—provided he was able to resist the final line of student-hawkers selling innumerable items “necessary to your college career.”

WITH MORE THAN 6000 students enrolled at the university this year, space on the wall in front of Cutler Hall, favorite meeting place between classes, is usually at a premium.

A New Opportunity

Army ROTC students will now be able to receive reserve officer's commissions in fields related to their majors as the result of a revision in the curriculum at OU.

The ROTC Department now offers commissions in armor, artillery, chemical corps, engineers, finance, signal, ordnance, quartermaster, and infantry branches. In the past, only infantry and quartermaster commissions were offered.

A New Season

The convocation season opened September 30 with an address by President John C. Baker in Memorial Auditorium.

Speaking on the subject of “The Broader Meaning of Universities in 1955,” President Baker based his address on experiences the past summer when he served as head of the U. S. delegation on the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations at a meeting in Geneva, Switzerland.

The president told his student audience that he is convinced from his travels that the people of the world want to learn from this nation.

The world, he said, is divided into two groups, the “haves” and the “have nots.”

“We are among the ‘haves’ and the greatest thing we have is education,” he said. “The ‘have nots’ lack education at all levels and want it badly.”

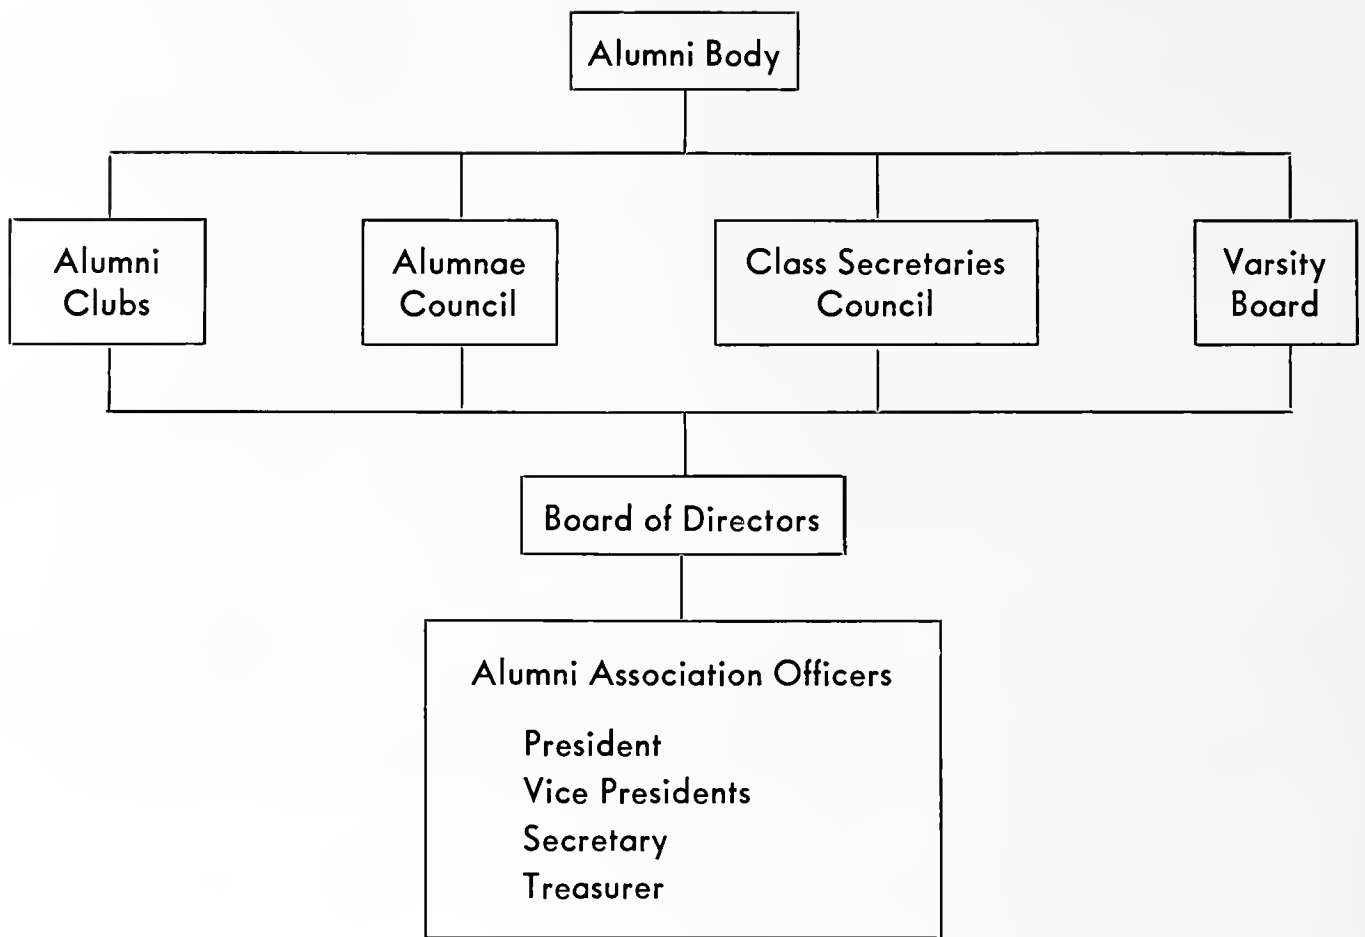

In both Pakistan and India, the president pointed out, 80 to 90 percent of the people are illiterate. Because leaders in those countries are interested in improving educational standards, “the universities in this country and in the rest of the world must aid these underdeveloped areas.”

In closing, Dr. Baker pledged that “everything humanly possible will be done in the future, even more than in the past, to keep Ohio University a well-run, high quality institution with an improving reputation.”

A New Home

The Athens Lutheran Foundation, which supports student religious work on the campus, has purchased a house on Church Street, formerly the home of Alpha Theta sorority.

The new home, which will provide Lutheran students with housing and a social center, will be operated by the foundation, which last year had 150 active members.

Reorganization and You

A group of Ohio University alumni have laid the groundwork for a new Association Structure that depends upon cooperation from all alumni areas.

IN 1848 A GROUP of Ohio University graduates met to "renew former associations and friendships" at the campus of their alma mater. By the time they adjourned they had established an organization which is today recognized by the Board of Trustees as the official representative of all graduates and former students of the university.

The Ohio University Alumni Association, with chapters in all sections of the United States, has grown quite naturally with the sharp increase in the number of Ohio University graduates.

The Basic Plan

To meet the needs of such a growth, and help prepare for an accelerating increase in future years, a re-organization of the Association has been completed and is now in effect.

Basically the new plan calls for a stepped-up program of activities and an organizational system that will permit the program to be carried to all chapters and every interested alumnus.

Although completion of the program will of necessity take some time, initial steps have already been taken to get it started.

Officially Launched

The new program was officially launched on October 14 when 12 members of the Alumni Board of Directors met at the University. Although present board members have been selected by Alumni Association officers, the Board of Directors will eventually include 33 persons, divided into six classes as follows:

ELECTED DIRECTORS. Twelve directors will be elected by members of the Association on Alumni Day (the day preceding June Commencement Day).

This year four have been named for three-year terms, four for two-year terms, and four for one-year terms. In 1956, and each succeeding year, four directors will be elected for terms of three years.

DIRECTORS REPRESENTING COUNCILS. Three directors will be appointed in April beginning next year, and in every second year thereafter, one each by the chairman of the Alumnae Council, the chairman of the Class Secretaries Council, and the chairman of the Alumni Varsity Board Council.

DIRECTORS REPRESENTING CLUBS. Ten directors will be elected by club presidents in March, April, or May beginning next year and in every second year thereafter, with one director being elected from each of the ten districts geographically determined by the Board of Directors.

DIRECTORS REPRESENTING THE UNIVERSITY AND THE OU FUND. Two directors will be appointed in March, beginning next year, and every second year thereafter, one each by the president of the University and the president of the OU Fund.

DIRECTORS AS OFFICERS. Four directors will be Association officers, elected by the Board.

EX OFFICIO DIRECTORS. The editor of The Ohio Alumnus will be a director, ex officio, during the term of his appointment, and the last retiring president of the Association will be a director, ex officio, for one year.

The Board of Directors, which will be the governing body for the Alumni Association, will meet at least three times each year. Its duties will include making arrangements for Alumni Day and other gatherings of OU alumni; maintaining, in conjunction with the University, an alumni headquarters; assuring publication of the alumni magazine; maintaining, with the University, a service to handle such alumni projects as class mailings, dinners, and reunions; and planning, organizing, and developing clubs, boards, councils, and other Alumni Association units.

Class Secretaries Council

At the June reunion, Ohio University alumni began a program of class organization which will be completely underway by 1960, when 40 classes will have been organized.

Each class, when it assembles at its regular reunion, elects a class secretary who then becomes a member of the Class Secretaries Council. The Council's function is to develop class reunions and class gift projects, whereby each class is able to donate a gift to the University at its reunion every five years.

Classes who held reunions in June are already organized and working on their gift projects.

Alumnae Council

In the past 15 years, women's clubs have progressed to the point where they now constitute one of the most active phases of the Alumni Association program.

For that reason, an Alumnae Council is being organized. Represented by presidents of all Women's Clubs and one woman from each chapter where one organization exists for both men and women, the Council will carry out a program of promoting women's interests in their clubs.

Varsity Boards

Alumni Varsity Boards are being set up throughout Ohio and the adjacent areas to do follow-up work on prospective students who are outstanding athletically and academically, and who meet standards of the University and the Athletic Department.

In each area where an Alumni Varsity Board is desired, a chairman is appointed by the Alumni Association officers. He in turn selects his Board members and serves as a member of the Varsity Board Council.

Alumni Clubs

Area alumni chapters continue to be the backbone of the Alumni Association. The success of the entire alumni program depends upon the active participation of each chapter, and it is with that thought in mind that the re-organization plan has come about.

By working through an alumni Board of Directors, which will be represented by members from all areas of alumni activity, down through the various segments of the Association, it is hoped that increased direct assistance can be given to each club.

Each alumni group will have a more direct voice in the overall Association program, and activities can be more integrated through the resulting exchange of ideas.

The organization is big. It is getting bigger. But its purpose remains the same—to establish mutually beneficial relations between Ohio University and its alumni.

There is no reason why the Alumni Association cannot grow in popularity as it grows in size. The key is the further organization of interesting and beneficial alumni programs and individual participation in all areas.

MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS and executive officers of the Ohio University Alumni Association attended a re-organizational meeting in the University Center October 14. HOME

WITH THE ANNUAL PARADE of floats suggesting some 38 different fates for the Golden Flashes of Kent State University, alumni and students of Ohio University lined the streets for the opening event of the 1955 Homecoming weekend.

The visiting gridders refused to carry out the parade theme, walking off with a 20-14 victory, but football fans were treated to a see-saw game and a royal halftime welcome from their alma mater.

The royalty was represented by Her Majesty Queen Anne Hermanns of Zeta Tau Alpha and Attendants Sue Bonham, Lindley Hall, and Barbara Billington, Pi Beta Phi.

Introduced at halftime, the queen in turn presented trophies to Phi Sigma Delta fraternity and Phi Mu sorority, winners of the float contest, and to Sigma Chi fraternity, adjudged tops in house decorations.

Taking on from there, the OU marching band, directed by Charles Minelli, presented a colorful comedy take-off on various types of bands.

The band formed a trapeze, a walking soldier with a gun, the letters "AHS" (any high school), musical notes, a beer glass, and a concert arrangement to portray six different types of bands—circus, service, high school, dixieland, German, and concert. The traditional OU was formed for the playing of the Alma Mater.

Male band members wore white coats and green trousers, while the girls wore white jackets and green skirts. All wore boots, and the majorettes had plumed hats.

In addition to leading the parade and presenting a show at the stadium, the band split into three groups the night before the game to spark a pep rally in front of the University Center. Forming in front of the Phi Mu house, the Science Building, and Scott Quadrangle, the band groups led students to the assembly area for the rally.

COMING

Following a new route to avoid congestion on Court Street, the Homecoming parade progressed down College Street, turned left at Howard Hall, and circled the College Green by way of Union Street, University Terrace, and Park Place. Winning floats were also paraded around the stadium track during the half-time show.

Voting was very close on the floats which had themes varying from those pictured on the next page to a huge telephone proclaiming "Dial O for Kent," an Egyptian temptress watching Kent's mummy, an old grad dreaming of a football scene, a piano (with candelabra) with the words "Beat Kent, by George," a huge piggy bank showing that Boyd Hall was "banking on OU," a vacuum cleaner sucking up a Kent player as OU "sweeps to victory," a long dragon which puffed smoke and proclaimed that "OU's got Kent draggin'," and many others.

THE OHIO UNIVERSITY marching band—110 strong—forms a stein (left) as it plays German bond music at the half. The formation was one of several featuring imitations of various types of bonds in a halftime show "Strike Up The Band."

FIRST PRIZES in the Homecoming float contest went to Phi Sigma Delto fraternity for its float featuring a "Flash in the Pan" (left), and to Phi Mu sorority, whose float (second picture) showed a thermomometer and a sleigh with the words "Keep 'em Down to Zero." Second place trophies were received by the girls of Scott Quadrangle, whose float (third picture) presented a cuckoo clock, the cuckoo swinging out and shouting "Beat Kent,"

←At the game, the reception, the dance, or the campus, Homecoming means the gathering of friends.

COMING BACK to renew acquaintances, alumni found a full weekend of activities awaiting them. A cafeteria-style luncheon was held in the ballroom of the University Center, with some classes reserving tables for informal meetings.

After the game alumni returned to the Center for President John C. Baker's annual reception in the ballroom lounge.

In the evening the spotlight fell on the Homecoming Dance, which was divided into two separate events in order to accommodate the large crowd. Karl Taylor and his "Taylor-Made Music" appeared at the Men's Gymnasium and Jimmy Karlan's 14-piece orchestra furnished music for dancers at the University Center ballroom.

The Homecoming queen and her attendants were introduced during the dance in the ballroom.

Although there were not as many alumni back for Homecoming as in the previous year, the weekend was by no means anti-climatic to the 1954 sesquicentennial event. The stadium was filled almost to capacity as alumni watched the Bobcats lose a hard-fought game which looked like a victory until the final quarter.

All events of the weekend were well attended and the photographs on the opposite page attest to the good time shared by returning alumni. Following a tradition begun two years ago, members of the journalism staff held a Journalism Breakfast at the Center on Homecoming day.

Most housing units sponsored events for alumni, and again the crowds in the new buildings, especially East Green, indicated that one of the favorite pleasures of returning grads is getting a look at the phenomenal growth of their university.

BOBCAT TACKLERS bring down a Kent State University ball carrier in second quarter action of the Homecoming football game won by Kent 20-14.

and Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, for its portrayal of a Greek warrior bowed before a temple (fourth picture). Sigma Chi fraternity took first place in the house decoration contest with its huge weather vane proclaiming "Kent in Vane, OU Will Reign" (right). Reports forecasting bad weather for Kent hopes were broadcast from the weather vane. Thirty-eight organizations entered the float contest, seven the house decorating.

The answer to this question provides one of the most remarkable stories the Alumnus Magazine has been privileged to present.

MARGARET SAHLIN, '55

HOW MANY Ohio University graduates would you guess have completed their undergraduate work with perfect, all-A accumulative grade records? One hundred? Two hundred?

Even if you take into consideration all possible obstacles that could prevent an outstanding college student from achieving such a record, chances are you will be startled to learn the answer to that question.

For among the nearly 20,000 men and women who have graduated from Ohio University during its 151 years of existence, those with accumulative 4.0 scholastic records have numbered—just two.

When Margaret Sahlin, an attractive coed from Charleston, W. Va., walked across the stage at the June, 1955 commencement, she became not only the second graduate, but the first woman to reach the elusive 4.0 goal.

Only man ever to turn the trick was Dr. Paul H. Anderson, a graduate of 1937 now devoting his unusual capabilities to the service of his country as a survey statistician with the U. S. Department of the Army.

There have been students who accumulated averages of 3.9 or better, and some who have missed the perfect mark by only one B in physical education. Others have received all A's in graduate work.

But the records of Miss Sahlin and Dr. Anderson stand together at the top.

To get a true picture of their accomplishments, consider that the average for graduating classes is usually 2.6, that not all classes have a 3.9 student, and that such students number one or two in a thousand.

A 2.6 places a graduate in the upper half of his class, and a 3.0 elevates him to the top quarter. By getting a 3.2 he moves to the upper 10 percent of his graduating class.

But the story does not end there. The rest reads like a story from Success Unlimited.

For Dr. Anderson, who also compiled a perfect record while receiving his Ph.D. in mathematics at the University of Illinois, the achievement had an added meaning. It meant the overcoming of obstacles that would have prevented a less determined man from even entering college.

Paul Anderson was born in Barberton, Ohio in 1911. His mother and father were both immigrants to this country, and neither of them had any education.

When Paul was just two years old, his family, which included a brother and a sister, moved to Yugoslavia. Three years later young Paul was stricken with osteomyelitis in both legs, one arm, and the left side of his face.

For 18 months he was confined to his bed by the bone disease which was to leave him partially crippled for life. Even after he was able to get out of bed he could manage only to crawl for 18 more months, and was forced to walk on crutches for three years after that.

In 1919 the Andersons returned to the United States, where they were detained for a month at Ellis Island while a 6-inch bone chip was extracted from Paul's right leg.

With these handicaps, plus that of extreme poverty, Paul entered grammar school at Barberton at the age of nine. There he was known for his wonderful sense of humor and determination to prove he could overcome any difficulty.

Although his brother and sister received only grammar school educations, Paul finished the first eight grades in six years, then went on to become valedictorian of the 1931 Barberton High School graduation class.

But another obstacle loomed large. Depression and poverty made it impossible for him to go on to college immediately.

Then in 1933 Ohio's Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation offered to pay his tuition and books for one year. With this and a $50 loan from a friend, Paul came to Ohio University.

The osteomyelitis was still active during his first two years at OU, but he managed to work, do his own cooking, and study diligently. He was described by one of his professors, Dr. George W. Starcher, now president of the University of North Dakota, as being "the kind of student every teacher likes to have."

"His papers were always the kind you could use as an example to grade the rest," Dr. Starcher said. "In some of the more advanced courses he was one who always got the work done, and stood out, not only because he could do the work but because of the easy manner in which his mind always seemed to work."

Paul had to drop out of school for one semester because of ill health, but he grew stronger physically during the last two years. After his first year he received tuition through scholarships.

Being primarily interested in mathematics, he disliked the study of languages, yet was able to win a $100 Super Greek Prize.

Rare is a 4.0?

A scholarship in mathematics enabled him to continue his studies at the University of Illinois, where he subsequently earned a fellowship.

Paul received the Ph.D. Degree from Illinois in June, 1940, and the following September he married Lois Marie Hurt, who had received her M.A. Degree at the same commencement.

Starting out in the teaching profession, Dr. Anderson taught various mathematics subjects at John Carroll University, Louisiana State University, and the University of Illinois.

When World War II came along, he accepted a position as regional statistician for the War Production Board in Cleveland. He has been in government service ever since, except for a brief return to teaching at Loyola University of the South during the 1948-49 school year.

Now working in Washington, Dr. Anderson is with the Army Department's deputy chief of staff for logistics, business and industrial management office. He is currently developing a program for collecting, processing, clearing, and reporting statistical data, as well as monitoring and preparing other reports.

During his busy years since graduation, he has authored or co-authored four books, 10 articles, and four book reviews, most of them on marketing, sales, and statistical subjects.

Official travel for the Federal Government has taken him on speaking tours throughout the United States. He has also prepared material for War Production Board press conferences.

Dr. Anderson is listed in Who's Who in America, Distinguished Leaders in the Nation's Capital, and American Men of Science.

Any doubt about the ability of this former Ohio University student to prove the strength of his determination has long ago disappeared.

Scholarships for Miss Sahlin

COINCIDENTALLY, Margaret Sahlin's father was born in Sweden, and she is strongly considering a career with the United States Government.

A political science major at OU, the university's top woman student has accepted a $2700 Ford Foundation Fellowship to Columbia University, in the School of International Affairs and the Russian Institute.

To take the fellowship she had to turn down scholarships from Radcliffe, Michigan, California, and Columbia. Margaret's father, Henry V. Sahlin, came to this country after receiving his education in his native Sweden. He is now an engineer with the West Virginia State Road Commission. Mrs. Sahlin is a registered nurse, although she is no longer actively engaged in her professional work.

In high school Margaret combined outstanding scholarship — she received only three or four B's, yet graduated 13th in a class of 270 — with a host of activities.

A member of the National Honor Society, she was also editor of the high school paper, president of the West Virginia Association of Student Journalists, president of Quill and Scroll, president of her high school sorority, and recipient of the D.A.R. Good Citizenship Award.

She received several national awards for high school newspaper writing, and during her college career worked for the Charleston Gazette, as a staff writer and a member of the promotion department.

Entering Ohio University on a scholarship, Margaret planned her academic program carefully, without selecting easy courses, to provide a broad educational background. Like Dr. Anderson, she received scholarships every year, because of her straight-A record.

But, with her studies, the energetic young student from West Virginia found time to become a campus leader in activities. She was president of Pi Beta Phi sorority, a member of the OU Post staff for three years, publicist for Women's League, publicity chairman for Political Week, Keynotes editor of Chimes, a charter member of the Cutler Society, and, to no one's surprise, a member of Mortar Board and Phi Beta Kappa.

Academically, she won the Alpha Delta Pi award to the sophomore woman with the highest grades, the Women's League award to the woman with the highest grades (two years), and the Alpha Lambda Delta award to the woman graduating with the highest grades.

How rare is a 4.0? About as rare as students like Margaret Sahlin and Dr. Paul H. Anderson.

Students Take a Look

*With science revealing
the mysteries of the universe, astronomy students*

WHEN America's man-made satellite "Mouse" is rocketed into the stratosphere, Ohio University astronomy students will be among those able to watch it revolve around the earth.

Although not planned as a major class project, observation of the basketball-sized satellite will be possible through the university's $15,000 telescope mounted atop the Engineering Building.

Rated by experts as having an exceptionally fine lens, the 13-foot telescope has been in use since 1950 and has been a major factor in the expansion of the Astronomy Department.

Under the supervision of Dr. Victor Goedicke, professor of mathematics and astronomy, students are able to study physical properties of the moon and certain planets, draw surface formations, and compare their work with detailed charts. Sometimes a visual spectroscope is attached so that students can study a star's spectrum and determine its temperature, elements, and amount of ionization.

Several times each year observation sessions are arranged for the general public. Each program of this type is concentrated on one specific celestial body so that it can be explained to an untrained observer.

An electric motor enables the telescope to be turned at the same rate of speed at which the earth is turning. Thus the focus remains constant without readjustments.

The telescope has two component lenses of 10-inch aperture with focal ratios of $f/16$. Its magnifying power is variable, depending on the eye piece used.

For instance, a long focal length eye piece makes it possible to focus on the entire moon, magnified 80 times. However, to study just one spot on the moon, a short focal length eye piece can be attached, increasing the magnifying power to 600.

By substituting a camera arrangement for the eye piece, students are able to photograph celestial formations. Several outstanding pictures have been taken in recent years.

The presence of a telescope at Ohio University is nothing new. Through the generosity of an alumnus, Arthur Howe Carpenter, '98, the university received its first telescope in 1935. Mounted in a dome on North Hill, the old telescope is still in operation. It is used chiefly for practice by advanced students.

An unusual history, familiar to some alumni, is connected with the old telescope. Mr. Carpenter, now retired and living in Middleport, constructed it while an associate professor of metallurgical engineering at the Armour Institute of Technology in Chicago.

The instrument caught the fancy of officials planning the 1933 World's Fair in Chicago, and was rushed to completion in time for the "Century of Progress" opening.

On clear nights it was used to turn on lights at the Fair by means of light energy obtained from the star Arcturus.

When the Fair closed, Mr. Carpenter donated the telescope to Ohio University, in honor of his father-in-law, Dr. D. J. Evans, '71, a member of the OU faculty for almost 50 years.

The reflector-type Carpenter telescope has a 20-inch aperture and an eight-foot tube. Through it an image reaches the viewer by means of a series of mirrors.

The new telescope, on the other hand, is a refractor-type instrument in which an image goes directly through the lens to the eye piece.

Whether they prefer to do it with or without mirrors, OU students are well equipped to observe the mysterious outer space through which they may some day travel.

PHOTOGRAPHS such as this one of the moon are taken by students, later studied in the classroom.

FIRST TELESCOPE, donated by Alumnus Arthur Howe Carpenter, '98, is still used by graduate students.

New Dean Named

Several months ago Dr. Harry E. Benz requested that he be relieved of duties as dean of the Ohio University College of Education in order to resume full-time teaching.

At the beginning of this semester the request was granted, with Dr. Francis Newell Hamblin, a veteran educator at the age of only 38, being named to the deanship.

The new dean, a native of Lexington, Mass., earned his AB degree from Amherst College in 1939. He was awarded his master's degree in education from Harvard University in 1946 and his doctorate from the same university in 1954.

From 1948 until 1953 Dr. Hamblin was registrar at the University of Vermont, and for the past two years has served as executive director of the United States Educational Foundation in Athens, Greece.

In the latter position he directed the education exchange program between Greece and the United States under the Fulbright Act.

Dean Hamblin served three years in the Army Engineers Corps in the European theater during World War II. Both before and after his military service he taught at preparatory schools in California and Arizona.

Dr. and Mrs. Hamblin have two children, a daughter 5, and a son, 3.

Dr. Benz, who has returned to teaching duties as a professor of education, was acting dean of the college for six months previous to his appointment as dean in November, 1953. He has twice served as director of the university summer session.

DR. HORACE T. HOUF

A member of the faculty since 1927, Dr. Benz began teaching at OU as an assistant professor of mathematics. Two years later he was made associate professor of mathematics, and in 1936 he was named professor of education. He was granted a year's leave of absence in 1946-47 to serve as a fellow in Human Relations at Harvard.

A native of Minnesota, Dr. Benz is a 1921 graduate of Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa. He holds a master's degree and doctorate from the State University of Iowa.

Before coming to OU, Dr. Benz was principal and superintendent of public schools at Ute and Stuart, Iowa, and an associate professor of education at West Virginia University.

Dr. Houf Retires

After 27 years as a professor of philosophy, Dr. Horace T. Houf has announced his retirement because of serious illness.

A faculty member since 1928 and chairman of the Department of Philosophy from 1936 to 1954, Dr. Houf relinquished his teaching post when he became ill last spring. At that time he hoped to be able to return to teaching this fall.

Before coming to OU, Dr. Houf served for five years as president of Rio Grande College, and for 10 years prior to that position he held pastorates in several Baptist churches in Ohio, including Marietta and Granville.

A native of Fulton, Miss., Dr. Houf received an AB degree from Westminster College and a bachelor of divinity degree from Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa. He received his MA degree from the University of Pennsylvania and a doctorate in humanities from Rio Grande College.

He came to OU as an associate professor of philosophy and was given full professor's rank in 1935. The following year he was named department chairman.

Active in the field of writing, he is the author of a widely-read text "What Religion Is and Does," as well as several religious articles. He is listed in several Who's Who directories in education and religion, and has held offices in numerous professional associations.

Dow Lake Planned

A 153-acre lake being planned at Strouds Run, near Athens, will be named for the late Dr. C. L. Dow, OU geology professor and a member of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources

DR. FRANCIS N. HAMBLIN

Commission until his unexpected death last July (October Alumnus).

The new lake, expected to be completed late in 1956, is to be located in a 2133-acre Forest, four miles east of the city off U. S. Route 50.

Action to name the lake for Dr. Dow was passed unanimously by the resources commission which cited his "untiring efforts in the establishment of the lake and the recreational area for his city and county, and for his years of invaluable contributions toward the preservation of Ohio's natural resources as a member of the commission."

Summer Travels

Several members of the faculty and administrative staffs travelled to Europe during the summer months.

Dr. B. A. Renkenberger, associate professor of romance languages and adviser to foreign students, led a regular tour through several European countries.

Others who visited Europe were Dr. James V. Rice, associate professor of romance languages, and Mrs. Rice; Janice Bixler, director of the OU Center; Edna Way, professor of space arts; Gertrude Szaroleta, instructor in piano; Dean of Women Margaret Deppen; Dr. Elizabeth G. Andersch, professor of dramatic art and speech; Lois Fri, secretary to the librarian; and Harriet Brownell, dietitian at Scott Quadrangle.

Mrs. Margaret Davis, director of residence services traveled through Mexico.

THE COLLEGES

Cutler Hall & Wings

FORTUNATELY it was not found necessary to remove West College (McGuffey Hall) when Ewing Hall was built in the '90's. East College (Wilson Hall), far removed from other construction, was safe.

Fortunately, too, Center College (Cutler Hall), although condemned and dilapidated, found in President John C. Baker a friend who led the movement to preserve it and to rededicate it "as a shrine of education and culture."

This block of buildings, constructed during the period 1816 to 1839, comprised a complete college until 1883.

Here is a glimpse of this college in 1875. Center College had just undergone extensive repairs. Contained in it were the library, the chemical and philosophical apparatus, the museum, three recitation rooms, two society halls, and 15 dormitories. Basement and attic both were in use.

In West College was located the chapel, two recitation rooms, and 18 dormitories. East College contained one recitation room and 26 dorms.

Students continued to live in Center College until further improvements were made in 1881-82. There were a number of "East Wingers" and "West Wingers" well into the present century.

In 1883 provision was made for a "young ladies' study" in West Wing. This was 15 years after the admission of the first woman to the University.

At one time this Wing housed in its basement the electric plant that was used for instructional purposes and for furnishing lights for the University and power for its water pumps. We are told that the campus presented "a charming view" when it was lighted with electricity.

East Wing at one time was fitted especially for use by Civil Engineering. There were mapping tables for preparing topographic and railroad maps, for railroad and highway engineering was an important subject. There was also a cement laboratory with "all modern apparatus" for cement testing.

At the turn of the century most of East Wing was covered with vines. Both Wings had shutters, as they do again today.

For a number of years following 1907 the Wings had porticos. The balcony of the West Wing portico was frequently used as a platform for speakers and entertainers. Student assemblies were gathered before it to hear addresses by the president. One reference to the use of this balcony will revive pleasant memories for those who attended summer school.

It was a pleasant evening in August, 1914. The Commercial Club of Athens was staging a farewell reception for summer school students. The space in front of Ewing Hall, where the Athens band was playing, "was brilliantly lighted by big lamps specially hung" and "400 Japanese lanterns hung on light wires stretched from tree to tree about the campus shed dim light under the great overshadowing trees . . ."

"Miss Liston's pupils stood on the balcony of the West Wing and sang songs that set the atmosphere into tremulous vibrations that found sympathetic chords in the ears and hearts of everybody within reach."

Where else in America can one stand at a distance of a hundred yards and block almost completely from his vision everything but this picture of a complete early Western American College?

Where else can one get a better sense of the educational ambitions of a people who but recently had gained for themselves a state—even a nation?

Here we have what is destined some day to become a national shrine.

Faculty Briefs

GEORGE E. MUNS, JR., assistant professor of musicology, received the degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of North Carolina this summer.

Doctor Muns, who taught at Bradley University and Arizona State College before coming to OU, took his undergraduate work at Southwestern College in Memphis, Tenn.

The annual rummage sale by the combined club is scheduled for November 26 and 27.

Youngstown

Alumni in the Youngstown area turned out en masse at the September 15 football game between OU and Youngstown University, and more than 100 of them attended an alumni coffee hour following the game.

Dave Howland, '21, a teacher at Youngstown's Rayen High School, was in charge of the affair in the Rayen cafeteria. Several alumni from Cleveland and Canton joined Youngstown alums at the get-together.

Detroit

Officers of the Detroit Alumni Chapter have been meeting monthly, planning a big membership drive for that area, as well as a regular program of activities.

The officers, elected this summer, are Tom Morgan, '50, president; Walter Yohe, '49, vice president; Richard Ludwinski, '48, secretary; Marvin Rice, '39, treasurer; and John Urban, '49, activities chairman.

Morgan, Yohe, and Rice also serve on a newly formed Board of Governors, along with William Brandel, '49, who is in charge of arranging meetings.

Zanesville

Election of officers for the coming year highlighted events at an October 5 meeting of Zanesville alumni. Named to head the organization was Edward H. McDowell, '49. He will be assisted by Charles Pepper, '49, vice president; and Mrs. Robert E. Nicholas (Ann Elizabeth Taylor, '51), secretary-treasurer.

Alumni Secretary Martin L. Hecht showed color slides of the University, and coffee and donuts were served after the business meeting.

Cleveland Men

A review of plans for the coming year was discussed September 12 at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Cleveland Bobcat Club.

Major events which were approved by the group include a November smoker; the annual December Christmas Dance; a February dinner meeting

MORE THAN 100 YOUNGSTOWN ALUMNI attended a coffee hour following the football game between Ohio University and Youngstown University on September 15. A group of them are shown here in the cafeteria of Rayen High School.

Bobcat Roundup

By Rowland Congdon, '49

FOUR GAMES into the 1955 Bobcat football season gives a pretty good idea of what to expect from here on out.

Ohio U. has compiled a 3-1 record to date, as this is being written just prior to the Miami game. With the Redskins and Indiana as the next opponents, don't be too surprised if the Bobcats pull an upset over one of these strong rivals.

This Bobcat team has not let the defeat by Kent State dampen its morale. They are more determined than ever that one loss will not ruin their season. Development of a two-unit system of substitution by Coach Carroll Widdoes and his staff has brought a healthy, competitive spirit among the ranks of the squad.

In the first three games, against Youngstown, Toledo and Marshall, each of the first two teams would try to outdo the other while in the game. This was brought to its peak against Toledo when the second unit scored more than the first.

The Kent aggregation was fired up to a very high peak and they admit they played their best game of the season against us. They sought and gained revenge for the defeat Ohio hung on them last season, 14-7, at Kent, for the Flashes only regular season loss. It also cost them the conference title, and they wanted to even the score.

The Bobcats, however, are still not out of the title race. A win over Miami and subsequent Miami defeat of Kent the following week with Ohio wins the rest of the way could bring the Bobcats the title. Ohio plays one more game than Miami and an equal number with Kent who has already tied one in the conference.

A Light Team

Weight disadvantage has been the Bobcats' problem to date. Each of the first four opponents outweighed Ohio in the line, with all of them having someone in the neighborhood of 220 or 230 pounds. Marshall even had one lineman who went as high as 260 pounds.

Ohio's top weight is Center Doug Fairbank's 209 pounds and only five of the Bobcats go over the 200-pound mark.

But the Bobcats overcame this obstacle in at least three of the games and were beaten more by Kent's spirit and revenge-motive than by the fact they were bigger than Ohio.

The Kent game brought a couple of firsts to the local football scene. It was the first time the Bobcats had played at home this season. It brought the first interception of a Bobcat pass and was the first time Ohio was behind all season.

So far, the Bobcats lead in just about all statistical departments over their opponents. And they have one of the been penalized only nine times for a total of 91 yards to 16 for 169.

Don McBride, junior quarterback from Columbiana, Ohio, leads the passing department.

Don was listed a week ago as 12th in the nation among the small colleges for pass completions. Latest national figures were not available when this was being written, but his eight for 16 in the Kent game brought his total to 22 completed out of 36 thrown in four games.

This is for a total of 268 yards and one touchdown to date and stamps McBride as a possibility for outstanding passer in recent Bobcat history.

Ohio has a one-two punch in this department, too. While McBride concentrates on throwing the short pass, sophomore quarterback Ron Macuga of the second unit likes to throw the long ones. He has completed three of seven tosses for a total of 91 yards. Two of those were hauled in by sophomore halfback Jim Hilles for a total of 81 yards. Macuga is from Masury, Ohio, and Hilles from Warren.

Both are Bobcat stars of the future, everyone is convinced of that.

Rushing Leaders

Vernon Smith, junior fullback from Eaton Rapids, Mich., is the rushing leader to date with 172 yards gained on 38 tries. All-Ohio Halfback Erland Ahlberg has the best average per try with a 4.9 mark on 30 carries.

Tops in the pass receiving department have been first unit ends Jim Krager and Jack Vair. Each has caught eight of McBride's tosses, Krager for 150 yards and Vair for 69 yards and one touchdown.

Neither of this pair was able to finish the 1954 season due to injury. Krager, a Steubenville senior, broke his collarbone in the second game last year and was out for the season. Vair injured a shoulder against Miami and also was done for the year. He is a Warren junior.

Each is making up for the games he missed last year, however.

Don Wirtz, junior fullback from Columbus, is leading scorer with 18 points through four games.

Highlight of the season to date came when Senior End Dave Lundberg

Dow Among Leaders

AN OHIO UNIVERSITY graduate has finished the 1955 golfing season in 16th place among the nation's money winning professionals.

In his fourth year as a pro, Dow Finsterwald, '52, definitely established himself as one of the country's top golfers with a total of $14,313.63 won on the rugged tournament trail. The figure comes from the Professional Golfers Association, which officially closes out its year in September.

Winning three tourneys, the Ft. Wayne Open, British Columbia Open, and Queen City Open, Dow actually copped his top prize of $3,000 with a second place in the Colonial Open. The Ft. Wayne and British Columbia events each added a purse of $2,400.

Other prizes ranged from $900 for 11th place in the Carling's Open to the smallest, $20 for 31st place at St. Petersburg. In all, the former Bobcat star placed in the money in 23 tournaments.

nation's small college leaders in the passing department.

Ohio has totaled 56 first downs to opponents' 43, had the ball for 224 plays to opponents' 216, have gained a total net yards of 975 to 854, gaining the edge in the passing department.

The Bobcats have had to punt only 11 times to 15 for the opposition, and have recovered six of their nine fumbles to the opponents' 10 of 17. Ohio has resulting touchdowns broke the game wide open.

Each time a Bobcat teammate scooped up the bounding ball and raced for a score. Jim Hall, senior center from Zanesville, ran 21 yards and Walter Gawronski, junior end from Maple Heights, went 45 for the score.

Opening the second half of that same game, Ahlberg went 90 yards for a touchdown with the kickoff and the Bobcats led 26-0 with all of the half remaining. From then on it was a matter of what the final score would be and it wound up 40-13, Toledo scoring on Ohio's third stringers in the last 10 minutes.

Since the whole story to date has been wrapped up in the play of the first two units, here is a rundown of the personnel making up those teams.

First unit has Vair and Krager at ends, Bob Sapashe, Lowellville junior, and Don Schulick, Youngstown sophomore, at tackles; Bob Ripple, Youngstown junior and Charles Karikas, Cleveland senior, at guards and Doug Fairbanks, Lakewood junior at center.

Quarterback is McBride with Ahlberg, Conneaut senior at one half and John Evans, captain and senior from Navarre, at the other. Vern Smith is the fullback.

The second unit is directed by Macuga, at quarterback, with Hilles and Dave Kuenzli, Upper Sandusky sophomore, at the halves and Wirtz at fullback.

OU Freshmen Win

SPORTING ONE of the heaviest OU lines in many years, the freshman football squad opened its 1955 season October 21 with a 26-14 conquest of Ohio Wesleyan's junior varsity.

After jumping to a 20-7 lead in the first half, the frosh held the ball for almost twice as many plays as their opponents in the last half to preserve their victory.

Four freshman scored for OU as the Bobkittens showed a varied scoring punch, with the 200-pound-per-man line paving the way. Among the quarterbacks directing the attack was Don Peden, Jr., son of the university's beloved football coach of more than two decades.

Cross Country

DISPLAYING MORE depth than the varsity could counteract, OU's freshman cross country runners edged the Bobcat varsity, 26-29, in an early season meet.

Varsity stars Frank Nixon and Wally Guenther finished one-two as expected, but the next varsity man to cross the finish line was Walt Mueller in seventh place.

Joe Mason, Fred Dickey, Paul Sizemore, and Jim Price took third through sixth places respectively to clinch the victory for the frosh.

Nixon's winning time was 10:32.8 over the two-mile course. Guenther followed with 10:54. The four top freshman, paced by Mason's 11:06, all finished the two-mile run over OU's hilly course in less than 12 minutes.

blocked two successive punts against Toledo. Both came in the second quarter after Ohio had scored once and

The Parallel Careers Of Two Coeds

By John Mitovich, '51, M.S. '55

AS A RULE, although there is little excuse for it, the newspaper profession is considered to be for men only.

All the false generalizations, myths, and stereotypes about female journalists, however, haven't deterred two Ohio University graduates—Eleanor Hazlett Ratell and Kay Murphy Mackintosh, both class of '36—from carving a niche for themselves in this part of the man's world.

Friends since their coed days, Eleanor and Kay today are successfully established as able craftswomen on the staff of the Miami (Fla.) Herald.

In addition to being the mother of two children, Eleanor edits the Glamor Clinic, a daily beauty and self-improvement column, and authors the Column with a Heart, a problem column, under the pseudonym of Eleanor Hart. Both columns circulate in close to 300,000 homes. Eleanor's mail alone is enough to justify a pay increase for the carrier since as many as 500 letters a week reach her desk.

As the Herald's decorating editor for the past four years, versatile Kay Murphy has a collection of ten writing awards to date. Her latest prize—the American Home Furniture Mart's Dorothy Dawe award for outstanding coverage in home furnishings—was won in late 1954.

Although she assumed her present title knowing very little about the job, Kay's interest in the field soon made up for the deficit. Book research and personal contacts with the trade gave her the self education she needed to become a prize winner.

In following parallel careers, Eleanor and Kay took detour routes to their jobs in sunny Florida. Eleanor went to the Herald in 1940 via the women's department of the now defunct Akron Times-Press and then the advertising department of an Akron business firm. Her first two jobs on the Herald, first an assistant and then as acting women's editor, were followed by a four-year tenure as a housewife. She returned to the Herald desk in 1947 as a copyreader on the women's page. From there she moved into her present position as a widely-read woman columnist.

Last month she and her husband Noel, a marine mechanic, celebrated their 14th wedding anniversary. They have two children, Mary Eleanor, 11, and Michael, 9.

Kay, whose first love always has been feature writing, also used the women's page as a stepping stone to her present respected position as first-class newswoman. Athens reared, she started her career on the Messenger society desk. During her brief period there, a telegram came from the Columbus Dispatch for Eleanor, asking her to come in for a job interview. Conscientious Kay quickly dispatched the contents of the wire to Eleanor, notifying her of the offer. When Eleanor failed to reply, Kay applied for and got the job. Her six years with the Columbus daily were spent first as a general assignment reporter and then as society writer.

A letter from Eleanor, already two years in Florida, beckoned Kay to a position with the Herald. Kay went south in December, 1942. Since then she has earned the tag of "newspaperman's reporter" by those in the profession who know her. Her columns, written in a lively, chatty style, are perfect examples of a woman who is in love with her work.

Kay is married to Angus (they call him Bill) Mackintosh, an ex-Stanford University student now associated with a Coral Gables realty firm.

A writing rivalry that started between the two Herald women staffers from OU during internship days on the Messenger still goes on today. Who is in the lead would be difficult to say. Both are top writers. What's more important is the contribution they are making to the cause of women in journalism.

IT WAS a hot July day in El Centro, California, but 23,000 feet above the ground First Lt. Harry R. Collins was concerned with the problem of freezing.

As part of his voluntary assignment with the Aero Medical Laboratory, the 1950 Ohio University graduate was about to bail out of a plane and fall more than three miles before opening his parachute.

A little more than one minute later Lieutenant Collins had set a new El Centro record. He had fallen 17,400 feet in 74 seconds before opening his chute at an altitude of 5600 feet—the longest “free fall” on record there.

The experience was not new to the former OU student. As part of his work in studying free falls and their effects on humans, he had made 16 previous jumps, the longest prior to his record fall being a free fall of 60 seconds.

Modern airplanes often fly at altitudes where the air outside the plane is too cold and too thin for survival. Therefore, a pilot who bails out at high altitude must free fall many thousands of feet until he reaches warmer and thicker air. If he opens his parachute immediately upon leaving the airplane, his slow descent through the upper atmosphere would mean death by freezing or lack of oxygen.

In free falling great distances, however, the body tends to tumble and spin at a high rate of speed. Lieutenant Collins is studying ways to combat and offset this tumble and spin in the only way possible—human experimentation.
